Forks in the Road: The Creation of a Career Path

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30 | 4 P.M. | HILL HALL 202

Michael S. Nagorka
Colorado School of Mines Alumnus

A career path frequently results from a number of choices, beginning with the choice of a university or college. Even once that choice is made, one’s career path is often the result of a number of choices and sometimes serendipitous events. This seminar will cover the career trajectory of one Mines student, from beginning decisions in high school to the choice, decades later, to return to Colorado as a "semi-retired" person.

Mike obtained both Bachelors and Masters degrees in Metallurgical Engineering from the Colorado School of Mines, followed by a PhD in Materials from the University of California, Santa Barbara.
